

Woodlands Market Opens in San Francisco

By TGR Edit Desk - 09/01/2017

Marin County's Woodlands Market is now open in San Francisco's Lumina building; the first full-service grocery in the Rincon neighborhood.

The store features natural wood, stone, and metal art, and offers a large selection of fresh produce, meat, and seafood, along with a variety of prepared foods, fresh-cut flowers, a coffee bar, in-house juices, and fresh bread daily.

"We're thrilled to expand into San Francisco," says Don Santa, Woodlands Market's founder. "Lumina is an ideal community for us—we can't think of a better location in the city to plant new roots."

Woodlands Market was chosen to occupy the space because of its commitment to providing natural and sustainable products from local suppliers over the course of its successful, 30-year history. The market brings a diverse selection of freshly prepared hot and cold foods and baked goods to the many new residents of Rincon Hill eager for such offerings. The gleaming, fully stocked store brightens the street corner and anchors the Folsom Street grand boulevard plan designed to create a bustling, consumer-friendly retail corridor.

